MERCHANTS WOULD PURIFY ADVERTISING

Opposed to Any Which Conveys to Public Any Idea Other Than Truthful.

At a special meeting, which will be miled probably in November, the Re-tail Merchants' Association will take definite action to stamp out false ad-vertising among the mercantile and other business estal lishments here.

Having heard numerous suggestions as to means for the correction of this evil the association at a general meet evil, the association at a general meeting at the Raleigh last night placed faelf on record as unaiterably opposed to any advertisement which conveys to the purchasing public any idea other than that which is absolutely truthful. At the instance of Julius Lansburgh, the president was authorized to eppoint a special committee which shall make a particular study of the advertising question and endeavor to devise a plan for presentation at the special meeting which will assure "pure" advertising for Washington.

To Review "Ads."

A suggestion which met with par-ticular approval was that of A. Wade Wells to the effect that a standing com mittee should be appointed to review advertisements and place on those passed the stamp of association's ap-

While the trend of opinion expressed

While the trend of opinion expressed in course of the discussion was that legislation should be sought from Congress which would make false or "fake" advertising punishable, the five-chants were quite anxious in the interim to take steps on their own initiative to check such advertisements.

Joseph A. Berberich advocated the enactment of a "pure advertising" law, similar to measures which he said had been adopted in several States. Washington Topham preposed a standing committee which should be authorized to hear completing and frown down sifalse advertising. Alfred Mayer regested a law patterned after one in Germany, which, he said, gives the government power of inspection to determine the truthfulness of all advertisements.

A special committee will be organized to investigate the use of certificates and coupons by chain stores and co-operate with the Corporation Counsel in eliminating the use of the coupons and certificates. Secretary Columbus reported that on a complaint filed by the association with the District Commissioners, the Corporation Counsel was now investigating the quession of use of these coupons to determine whether their use is unlawful, as use of trading stamps has been determined to be by the listrict authorities. The special committee will also investigate the question of cooperative buying to determine what steps shall be taken by the merchants in combat such a movement on the part of the public.

Secretary Columbus reported that the Korporation Counsel has practically completed the drafting of a law to prevent "fake" auctions.

Silver Cups Presented. On the motion of E. C. Graham, a special committee was authorized to co-operate with other civic and trade bodies in an effort to obtain a bad check

The silver cups awarded in the window-dressing contest conducted with the fall trade inaugural recently held under the ausnices of the association were presented by Vice President M. A. Leese, who presided in the absence of President R. P. Andrews. The first prize was presented to the Palais Royal and received by O. D. Grimes, the dresser of the window. C. H. Woodward accepted the second prize for the Globe-Wernicke Company, and the third was held for J. E. Cunningham & Co.

In accepting the cup presented by the Retail Shoedealers' Association for the window making the best display of footwear. Joseph A. Berberich declared that the window-dressing feature of the trade inaugural was the best advertising scheme that the association had ever conceived, and ursed its repetition.

By a unanimous vote, the association indorsed the petition of the Sons of Jonadab, calling on the District authorities to request Congress to establish a hospital for inchristes.

THE BEST Photoplay Department in WASHINGTON

Washingtonian Has a Plan To Help the Late Comers in The Theater.

One of the best known of the pho-toplay patrons of Washington, who has the distinction of being personally known by, and very popular with, more photoplay producers and actors than any other individual patron we know, has just devised a very interesting system for keep-ing in touch with the scenes of a multi-reel feature photoplay, which is to be sumbitted to some of the

This man is Thomas W. Gilmer. and if he wasn't quite so in love with Washington as a place of residence and the Government service as a place to work, he would probably be showing producers of pictures throughout the country how photoplays should really be produced. Mr. Gilmer probably knows more about the technique of photoplays and the methods of production than hapy outsider in the country. He believes that some indication should be given on the film of multi-reel productions as to just what portion of the film is being shown, so that people coming into a theater late might know just how far the story has progressed. This is an interesting question that has been discussed by photoplay patrons many times but apparently has never been given much attention by the producers.

It frequently happens that the lack of knowledge of what has really transpired has spoiled the enjoyment of a well-acted drama. Mr. Gilmer's idea is to give everybody notice of just how much of the film has been run, how much more is to iun, etc., in every caption or subtitle, if anyone can improve upon it both Mr. Gilmer and the photoplay editor of The Times would like to hear from them.

"Each scene in a photoplay should have a number assigned to it on the film for convenience of reference," he explains. "Numbers should be used in such a way as to indicate—the reel to which each scene and each leader belongs, the whole number of scenes and leaders in each reel and in the production. This may be accomplished by using numbers as they are used in numbering the rooms in an office building, floor number corresponding to reel number and room number to scene and each leader belongs, the whole number of scenes in the first reel and 200 scenes in all; and that there are forty-five scenes in the screen of the first reel and 200 scenes in the first reel and 200 scenes in the photoplay. Tals information would be greatly appreciated by all concerned.

"For cut-backs the fild number should necessitate skipping numbers on the him of the play, the reel n

The organization of the Congress Film Company, in which many local people are interested, has been completed, and the company is acout to enter upon a wide range of activities in which motion pictures play a part.
